Project Description:

The Illinois Sustainable Food Project (ISFP) strives to provide locally-sourced, healthy, and nutritious product for UIUC Dining while providing an educational experience to the student body. Students and staff use the Food Science & Human Nutrition Pilot Processing Plant (FSHN-PPP) to create food products that get consumed across campus and beyond. As a team committed to sustainability, ISFP continuously looks for ways to reduce their environmental footprint. This funding supports the purchase and installation of a highly water efficient handwashing sink that will conserve over 10,000 gallons of water annually and reduce handwashing time. A sign will show sink users how much water each individual directly saves. Consequently, students who enter the workforce in food production will have a better understanding of their responsibility to environmental stewardship and their environmental footprint.
