

Volta is a company that installs a Level 2 charger for free and charges EVs for free - getting all of their revenue from the ads on the video display screens. This might seem outlandish at first but in this area, the cost for the electricity would run about $.70 an hour (using the highest recant rate on my bill)

Their reports say that for shopping areas EV drivers tend to shop for twice the time they normally do. So there is an advantage for businesses as well.

Recently there was an article about expansion to Europe and an article about partnering with a movie chain.

We maximize communication with project teams throughout the installation process.
