Three identical signs were placed in garden areas that were undergoing the most major revamp, stating that an upgrade was in progress, and that the gardens are a student project in the Sustainability Living Learning Community funded by a grant from the Student Sustainability Committee. The College of ACES featured the gardens in a facebook post:

6. Please describe project progress *

This semester, the Hands-on Native Plant Care class planted over 70 native plants in the gardens, either purchased from nurseries, or sourced from plants grown by myself, the Grant Project Manager/Instructor. We also weeded, watered, and mulched the gardens.

7. Please describe how your project integrates student involvement and community outreach *

This semester, students in the Hands-on Native Plant Care class planted new plants in the gardens, cared for the gardens by weeding and mulching, and learned about native plant identification and care.
