Project Description:

The U of I research farms have undergone many changes since they were originally farmed. The original owners put in tiles to drain their farms to make them more productive through reducing the prolonged saturation of the soils. While some of these tiles are still in operation, many of the tiles are showing their age and lack of adequate sizing causing them to fail. We are requesting funding to have a 3rd party assess the drainage on the University of Illinois property so we can efficiently fix and replace tiles in the future.
